What opportunities are there to promote the award or prize winner?

Celebrating the achievements of FPH members is really important to us. That's why we encourage all award and prize winners to write a blog for us giving a brief account of the work you undertook to receive the award. All of our blogs are promoted to our members and wider public health community, and the aim is to inspire FPH members to apply for awards in future years, and celebrate the achievements of the award-winner – two things that are really important to us.
